Hello Flock Safety Employee,

By way of introduction, my name is Joshua Chappell. My intent is to apply for the Creative Director position at Flock Safety. I feel I have a lot of immediate value I can bring to your organization.

Your posting says this is not a hands-off review role. That is the part that interests me. I have spent seven years shaping the concept and then staying in the edit: I direct cinematic brand documentaries and interviews from concept through final delivery, command teams of 5 to 20, and partner with CEOs and executives on creative direction. At Grand Canyon Education I directed cinematography for higher-end brand shoots each quarter inside a 15-person media team and delivered 200+ videos that reached millions on TV, paid social, and organic channels. I also build the systems your posting asks for. I architected an asset library in Frame.io that cut retrieval time over 50%, a storyboard process that cut revision back-and-forth over 50%, a color grading pipeline that runs 3x faster in DaVinci Resolve, and AI-assisted workflows that cut production time in half without making the work feel synthetic. Turning a complicated subject into something a person actually feels is the work I like most, and I have done it for construction crews, a bath remodeler caring for veterans, and a university reaching alumni on national broadcast.

I appreciate that you value diverse perspectives working together with mutual respect, and building technology that keeps communities safe; these are all values that I strive to emulate.

Willing to relocate.

Thank you for taking the time out of your busy day to read my letter. I look forward to the opportunity of doing an interview with you.

Sincerely,
Joshua Chappell
