AT A GLANCE

Pay	Not listed in the posting he pasted. Live TPAction ballot chase listings on ZipRecruiter show $27,000 to $33,000 (Scottsdale) and $41,000 to $60,500 (Mesa) a year, which may be ZipRecruiter estimates. Below his $75,000 floor.
Location	Not stated. He must live within 3 miles of the zip code on the posting, and that zip code was not in the pasted text. The closest live listing is in Mesa, zip codes 85204 and 85210.
Work mode / commute	In-person field work in an assigned territory: driving and going door to door. Valid license, reliable car, insurance and a background check required. The commute depends on the territory, and he only qualifies if 85206 is within 3 miles of its zip code. Likely seasonal, ending at the November 3, 2026 election.
Fit	Partial

How to apply	No link was saved with the posting he pasted, and its zip code was left out. This ZipRecruiter search lists live TPAction ballot chase jobs near Mesa, such as the Mesa 'Sherwood Park Ballot Chase Representative (85204, 85210)', posted about 22 days ago, but none is confirmed to be the same posting. Check which territory is within 3 miles of 85206. Whether the original is still open is unknown, with the November 3 election three weeks out.

Why it fit

- Self-directed work against targets: he ran his own company for six years and set his own schedule and goals.
- Daily tracking in spreadsheets matches how he tracked revenue and expenses every week in Excel and Google Sheets.
- Building relationships and community: he built ties with homeowners, realtors and CEOs, and organized a community gallery night and church community events.
- Facebook, Instagram and X are documented, and he has the team management the posting lists as a "WOW" skill (teams of 5 to 20 at Lightbox).

Gaps to be ready for

Suggested answers carried over from the original analysis. Some assume a course or certification is under way; say those only if they are true when you interview.

- No field staff or grassroots campaign experience, which is the first minimum qualification. His answer: "I haven't run a field program. I've run my own business against weekly targets for six years, generated my own leads, and I learn fast." He should not present the Legislature video work as organizing.
- He must live within 3 miles of the posting's zip code, which is unknown. His answer: "Which territory is this for? I'm in Mesa 85206." Confirm before applying.
- Pay was not listed and is likely hourly or low, and the job is probably seasonal. His questions: "What's the rate, how many hours a week, what do the incentives pay out, and does this run past November 3?"

- 'Unmatched passion for conservative politics' is a stated minimum qualification. Only he can answer it, in his own words. Claude deliberately left it out of the cover letter.

JOB DESCRIPTION (WORD FOR WORD)

COMPANY RESEARCH

Turning Point Action (TPA) is a 501(c)(4) political advocacy group founded in 2019 by Charlie Kirk as the sister organization and political arm of Turning Point USA (TPUSA). Its headquarters is in Phoenix. It runs the "Chase the Vote" ballot-chase program, and in 2024 the Trump campaign handed it parts of its Arizona field work. Revelio Labs, a third-party estimate, puts TPA at about 105 employees in March 2026 and counts 353 job postings in 2026, up 173.5% from 2025. No employee review profile for TPA turned up on Glassdoor, Indeed, Comparably, CareerBliss, or Kununu. Most "Turning Point" review pages belong to unrelated employers, such as a UK health charity and an Indian retailer. The closest data comes from TPUSA, the sister 501(c)(3), and every review figure below is labeled as TPUSA. Those reviews cover the whole company (117 on Glassdoor, 37 on Indeed). None of them is specific to the media team or to ballot chasing. About the two roles: Ballot Chase Representative postings are tied to individual ZIP codes, and they include Mesa ones such as "Mesa High" and "Enid Park (85206)". The work is contacting low-turnout voters in an assigned precinct and reporting daily to a ballot chase manager. The postings require a driver's license, reliable transportation, and a background check, and some require living within 3 miles of the posted ZIP code. The Media Administrator role (Phoenix, full-time) appears only as a Talent.com aggregator snippet, with no duties, pay, or posting date shown.

Glassdoor

3.6/5 (Turning Point USA, not Turning Point Action) (117 (TPUSA, company-wide)) No Glassdoor page for Turning Point Action was found, so these numbers are for Turning Point USA (TPUSA), its sister organization. TPUSA has a 3.6/5 rating from 117 reviews, close to the 3.7 non-profit industry average, and about 59-60% of reviewers would recommend it. Work-life balance scores 3.3/5 and compensation 3.2/5.

Glassdoor's summary says 'poor management' comes up in 17 reviews and 'disorganized leadership / shifting priorities' in 7. Positive reviews praise the mission, the HQ culture, flexibility, and the job as a first step in conservative politics. Negative reviews mention high turnover, pressure to be available after hours, and heavy workload for the pay. The page still lists Charlie Kirk as CEO, so its 74% CEO approval is out of date. One reviewer claimed management pushes staff to post positive reviews; this is not verified. The sample is small and covers all of TPUSA, not specific teams. Search snippets did not show review dates for most reviews. Source

Indeed reviews

3.1/5 from 37 reviews (Turning Point USA, not Turning Point Action) No Indeed company page for Turning Point Action turned up. Turning Point USA's Indeed page shows 3.1 stars from 37 reviews, which Indeed marks as 'evolving'. It also shows a work wellbeing score of 71 from 39 survey responses, with 'stress-free work' rated Average. This is a small sample covering all of TPUSA, not specific teams. The Indeed MCP tool failed to connect for this session, so no further Indeed metadata was pulled. Other 'Turning Point' Indeed pages (UK, India, Australia) are unrelated employers. Source

WHAT EMPLOYEES SAY: PROS AND CONS

Pros

- Reviewers describe it as a good first job in conservative politics, especially for recent graduates (TPUSA reviews). [1] [2]
- Some 5-star reviews praise the HQ culture, work-life balance, flexibility, and the mission (TPUSA reviews). [1] [2]
- TPA is growing fast, which means openings and room to move up. One estimate counts 353 postings in 2026, up 173.5% from 2025, with about 105 staff (TPA, third-party estimate). [1]
- The headquarters is in Phoenix, a short commute from Mesa, and ballot chase postings exist for Mesa ZIP codes such as Mesa High and Enid Park (85206) (TPA). [1] [2] [3]
- The work is high-profile, which can help a resume in political media and campaign work. TPA ran a large part of the 2024 Trump ground game in Arizona and has been credited with 2026 primary results in Indiana (TPA). [1] [2] [3]
- Indeed's work wellbeing score is 71 from 39 responses, a middling result rather than a warning sign (TPUSA). [1]

Cons

- Management is the most common complaint. Glassdoor's summary counts 'poor management' in 17 reviews and 'disorganized leadership / shifting priorities' in 7, and some reviewers describe unprofessional or passive-aggressive managers (TPUSA). [1] [2]
- Long hours and after-hours availability. Work-life balance averages 3.3/5, 'no work/life balance' appears in several reviews, and current staff mention early mornings, late nights, and a lot of travel (TPUSA). [1] [2]
- Pay is low for the workload. Compensation is rated 3.2/5, and reviewers say the workload is heavy relative to pay (TPUSA). [1] [2]
- Turnover is high. One former administrator called it 'insane', and another said hiring and departures happened at the same pace (TPUSA). [1] [2]
- Turmoil since Charlie Kirk's killing in September 2025. Former staff allege loyalty checks followed by firings, retaliation against a PR manager who questioned leadership, and 20-hour workdays. These claims are disputed and not independently verified (TPUSA). [1] [2] [3]
- Older allegations of a 'frat-boy' party culture, misconduct at events, and cover-ups. Sourcing for these varies (TPUSA). [1] [2]
- Ballot chase jobs follow the election calendar and are tied to one ZIP code. They need your own car, a license, and a background check, and some require living within 3 miles of the territory. The postings seen do not say how long the job lasts (TPA). [1] [2]

Watch for

- No employee reviews exist for Turning Point Action itself. Every rating and quote here is from Turning Point USA, a separate legal entity, and covers the whole company rather than the media or field teams.

- Former staff say people were questioned about loyalty and then fired after September 2025, and a PR manager says she was dismissed for asking questions. These claims are disputed and not verified, but they are recent and touch the media/PR side.
- A Glassdoor reviewer claimed management pushes staff to post positive reviews. This is not verified, but if true the 3.6 rating would be inflated.
- TPUSA's Glassdoor page still lists Charlie Kirk as CEO, so its CEO-approval number (74%) does not reflect current leadership.
- The Media Administrator listing was seen only as a Talent.com snippet with no date, duties, or pay. Confirm on tpaction.com/careers that it is still open.
- Many Glassdoor and Indeed 'Turning Point' pages, rated about 2.7 to 3.4, belong to unrelated employers such as a UK health charity. Do not mix them with TPA or TPUSA.

Bottom line

There is no direct review data for Turning Point Action, so everything here comes from its sister group, TPUSA. TPUSA's ratings are middling: 3.6/5 on Glassdoor from 117 reviews and 3.1/5 on Indeed from 37. Reviews are mixed. Positives are the mission, the culture for young staff, and value as a first job in politics. Negatives are management, long hours, pay, and turnover. On top of that, there are unverified reports of loyalty-based firings since late 2025. TPA is hiring heavily for 2026, and both roles are in Mesa or Phoenix, so the jobs look real and close to home. For Ballot Chaser, ask how long the job lasts, what the weekly hours are, and whether mileage is reimbursed. For Media Administrator, ask who the role reports to, how big the media team is, what after-hours or weekend coverage is expected, and how much staff turnover the team has had since 2025.
