AT A GLANCE

Pay	$200,000-$250,000 base + Flock stock options
Location	Atlanta or Boston hub (Flock prefers candidates in these two cities)
Work mode / commute	In person at a hub. The posting is not marked remote, so moving from Mesa, AZ 85206 is likely required; a daily commute is not possible. His cover letter says 'Willing to relocate', so confirm that is true.
Fit	Weak to Partial (a reach)
First handled	2026-09-15
Status	Queued (not yet applied)
Found on	Posting pasted into Claude by Joshua (hosted on Ashby; no link saved)
How to apply	Apply online on Flock's careers page (its job listings are hosted on Ashby) and search for 'Creative Director (Brand, Film & Motion)'. No posting link was saved, and the role did not appear on Dice or ZipRecruiter on 2026-10-14, so whether it is still open is unknown.

Why it fit

- He has handled every stage of production they name: editing pace, color grading (DaVinci Resolve, a grading pipeline he rebuilt to run 3x faster), and finishing.
- He builds systems that speed up delivery, with numbers: a Frame.io library that cut retrieval time 50%, a storyboard process that cut revision rounds 50%, and AI workflows that cut production time in half.
- Seven-plus years of documentary and commercial storytelling from concept to delivery, directing crews of 5 to 20.
- Pay is about three times his minimum, so a long-shot application is worth an hour.

Gaps to be ready for

Suggested answers carried over from the original analysis. Some assume a course or certification is under way; say those only if they are true when you interview.

- He has never led teams that include art direction and design leads; he directed production crews and worked within a 15-person team. Answer: 'I've owned concept through delivery for seven years and directed crews of up to twenty. I haven't managed design and art-direction leads. That would be the step up for me.'
- No design portfolio (layout, identity, design systems); he is a filmmaker. Answer: 'My portfolio is film and motion. My design work is motion graphics in After Effects, not identity or layout systems.'
- Typography is not in his record at all. Answer: 'I haven't owned typography standards. That's where I'd lean on a strong design lead.'
- He has never owned brand guidelines or a design system. Answer: 'I've built production systems: asset libraries, a storyboard process, a grading pipeline. That's adjacent to brand systems, not the same thing, and it's where I'd add the most.'
- No experience marketing a tech product, and Flock's subject matter is sensitive. Answer: 'I haven't marketed a tech product. My strength is finding the human story, and I'd partner with product marketing on the technical side.'

JOB DESCRIPTION (WORD FOR WORD)

Copied word for word from the posting Joshua pasted into Claude on 2026-09-15.

> The Problem Flock's creative group is expanding as the company raises its standard of visual storytelling and campaign execution across brand, film, and digital experiences. This momentum creates a need for unified creative leadership to turn complex technology and public safety outcomes into compelling, human-centered narratives. You will own that direction, driving the creative concept, visual identity, and craft bar across design, film, and motion.
> What You'll Own
> - Direct integrated campaigns, product launch narratives, and flagship brand films from initial concept through final delivery.
> - Define and maintain the visual, cinematic, and editorial standards across design, motion, and video production to build a recognizable creative signature.
> - Lead and mentor multidisciplinary craft teams, guiding discipline leads in art direction, storytelling, and creative critique.
> - Establish operational systems, including reference libraries, templates, and production guidelines, that elevate quality while improving delivery speed.
> - Partner with brand strategy and production leadership to translate executive goals into clear creative briefs and execution plans.
> What This Role is Not
> - This is not a hands-off review role, you will actively shape concepts, guide edits, direct art execution, and refine details across all mediums.
> - This isn't a high-volume template production management job, your main focus is establishing concept quality and narrative depth.
> - This is not an isolated brand strategy position, you will work directly alongside production and cross-functional teams to ship live campaigns.
> What You Bring
> - Proven track record leading multidisciplinary creative teams across art direction, design, motion, and cinematic film production.
> - Deep portfolio demonstrating high-craft visual design alongside narrative documentary or high-paced commercial storytelling.
> - Advanced fluency in the complete production lifecycle, including typography, editing pace, color grading, sound design, and finishing standards.
> - Experience setting practical brand guidelines, design systems, and creative review frameworks for internal teams and agency partners.
> - Ability to direct campaigns that balance emotional human narrative with clear technical product messaging.
> Compensation In this role, you'll receive a starting salary between $200,000 and $250,000 as well as Flock Stock Options. Base salary is determined by job-related experience, education/training, as well as market indicators. Your recruiter will discuss this in depth with you during our first chat. Why Flock 💚 Every community deserves to be safe. Flock builds the technology that makes that real: last year we supported over 1 million criminal investigations and helped locate more than 10,000 missing people. We're 1,700 people building the impossible with over $1B in funding, and the expectations are high on purpose. If you want a role where the stakes are real and the pace matches, this is it. 📍 Some problems get solved faster in the same room, so we prioritize candidates in Atlanta and Boston. Hub-based roles mean real in-person time with your coworkers. Remote roles exist, and when a posting is open to remote work, it says so. 🌟 The impossible takes every kind of mind. Flock is an equal opportunity employer, and we know the best solutions come from diverse perspectives, experiences, and skills working together with mutual respect. Everyone is welcome to apply. If you need assistance or an accommodation due to a disability, email recruiting@flocksafety.com; your information stays confidential and is used only to arrange the right accommodation for your interviews. 💰 On compensation. We pay fairly for the work. Base salary is determined by job-related experience, education, training, and market indicators. The range in this posting covers base salary only and doesn't include equity, sales bonus plans where applicable, or benefits. The range may be adjusted over time, and this posting may span more than one career level. 📣 One last thing. All legitimate communication from Flock comes from an email ending in @flocksafety.com or noreply@ashbyhq.com. We never make offers through messaging apps or third parties, and we never request payment or sensitive personal information during hiring. If you encounter suspicious outreach about a Flock role, report it to recruiting@flocksafety.com.

COMPANY RESEARCH

Flock Safety is an Atlanta-based company that makes license plate reader cameras and related public safety software sold to police departments, cities, and businesses. Recent press puts it at about 1,500 employees and an $8B valuation, and it is described as remote-first. Both roles Joshua applied for sit in Marketing. The Creative Director role (Remote - USA / Los Angeles, listed at $200K-$250K) owns the visual identity and leads brand films, campaigns, and launch stories. The posting says it is "not a hands-off review role." The Senior Video Editor role (Film & Editorial, Remote - USA, $100K-$120K plus stock options) would be Flock's first full-time dedicated editor. It covers documentary-style, brand, and product video. The company is going through a hard period. In October 2026, Reuters reported plans to cut about 270 jobs (about 18% of staff) after a voluntary buyout program. This comes amid public backlash over surveillance and a wave of city contract cancellations. I found no reviews specific to the creative or film team. All ratings below are company-wide, and many of the negative reviews come from sales roles.

Glassdoor

About 3.9 / 5 (one snapshot); about 70-72% would recommend to a friend; work-life balance about 3.5-3.8 depending on the cached page (About 212-214 reviews) Company-wide. Glassdoor has several 'Flock' pages. Only employer ID E2121535 is Flock Safety. The 4.7 (33 reviews, insurance industry) and 3.8 (56 reviews, different CEO) pages belong to other companies and should be ignored. On the Flock Safety page, reviewers praise the mission, coworkers, and room to take on new work. Common complaints are a fast pace with frequent change, heavy workload, too many meetings, and managers without training. Recent reviews include a January 2026 one saying PIPs are handed out freely and sales territories change every quarter, and others citing high turnover and a gap between senior leaders and the product. Many of the harshest reviews come from sales staff. The Atlanta-only page shows 4.0 from 84 reviews. Numbers come from cached search snapshots and may have shifted. Source

Indeed reviews

3.1 / 5 from 29 reviews (page updated June 8, 2026); Work Wellbeing score 70-71 ('Average') from 28 survey responses Company-wide, small sample. Category scores: management 2.8 (lowest), work-life balance 3.0, culture 3.1, pay and benefits 3.7 (highest). A recent Marketing Manager review is positive and mentions growth, flexible PTO, and fertility benefits. Negative reviews cite weak management and limited advancement. One Atlanta reviewer reported 75-hour weeks and managers who are 'too busy and out of touch.' Older field-technician reviews raise safety concerns. The Indeed MCP connector failed to connect, so these figures come from web search snapshots only. Source

WHAT EMPLOYEES SAY: PROS AND CONS

Pros

- Reviewers across sites name the mission and the people as the main reasons they like the job. They describe coworkers as talented and the culture as supportive. This feedback is company-wide, not specific to the creative team. [1] [2] [3] [4]
- Both posted salaries are clear and competitive for remote roles. Creative Director lists $200K-$250K. Senior Video Editor lists $100K-$120K plus stock options. [1] [2] [3] [4]
- The creative group is being built, which gives a new hire room to shape it. Flock has posted a Creative Director, its first full-time dedicated video editor, a Creative Manager (player-coach), and a Senior Creative Operations Producer for brand and video projects. The Creative Director posting calls for hands-on work on concepts and edits, not only review. [1] [2] [3] [4]
- The company is described as remote-first, and both roles are listed as Remote - USA. That works for someone based in Mesa, Arizona. [1] [2] [3]
- Pay and benefits score highest of Indeed's categories (3.7). Reviewers mention flexible or unlimited PTO, fertility benefits, and an equipment and home-office start-up bonus. Blind's overall rating is 4.4, but it rests on only 18-19 reviews. [1] [2] [3]

- Some reviewers value the autonomy and the chance to take on new projects. One Glassdoor review is titled 'Fast-paced company full of opportunity.' Flock was also on Built In's 2024 Best Places to Work list, though that list is older and predates the 2026 turmoil. [1] [2]

Cons

- Flock is reducing staff right now. Reuters reported (Oct 8, 2026) plans to cut about 270 jobs, about 18% of roughly 1,500 staff, after a voluntary separation program that closed Oct 2. Departures are expected at the end of October, and WIRED's sources said layoffs would 'almost certainly' follow if too few people took the buyout. Nothing found says whether marketing or creative roles are affected. [1] [2] [3] [4]
- The company faces strong public backlash over surveillance and privacy. Concerns include police sharing Flock data with ICE. A Reuters/Ipsos poll found 47% of Americans oppose Flock cameras in their communities. The CEO has said internal morale has taken the most damage. A brand film and editorial lead would be telling this company's story while it is under heavy public scrutiny, and the work would carry Flock's name in a portfolio. [1] [2] [3] [4]
- Customers are leaving. Secure Justice counts at least 214 cities and counties that have dropped Flock since 2021, 90 of them in 2026. IBTimes reports 93 ended contracts in August alone. WIRED reports this could leave Flock short of its revenue goals. Flock says renewals outpace cancellations. [1] [2]
- Reviewers describe a fast pace with constant change, heavy workloads, and too many meetings. One Indeed reviewer reported 75-hour weeks. A Glassdoor review is titled 'Terrible place to work - Overworked.' Indeed rates work-life balance 3.0, and Glassdoor rates it about 3.5-3.8. [1] [2] [3]
- Management is the weakest-rated area. It scores 2.8 on Indeed. Glassdoor reviewers say people managers lack training, promotions are rare, turnover is high, and many senior leaders have never worked with the product or its end users. [1] [2] [3]
- Some reviewers say pay lags the market. A RepVue review cites no 401K match and expensive healthcare, and compensation/benefits is Blind's lowest category (3.8). The PIP and quota complaints come mostly from sales staff, so they may not apply to marketing. [1] [2] [3]
- The Senior Video Editor posting says Flock prioritizes candidates near Atlanta and Boston for in-person reasons, and the Creative Director listing names Los Angeles. A Mesa, Arizona applicant may rank behind local candidates even though both roles are listed as remote. [1] [2]

Watch for

- Active staff reduction of about 270 roles (about 18%) as of October 2026, with involuntary layoffs reported as likely if the buyouts fall short. Confirm the creative roles are funded and were not affected before accepting an offer.
- City and county contract cancellations are rising (90 in 2026 per Secure Justice, via Futurism), and WIRED reports this puts revenue goals at risk.
- A privacy lawsuit in Virginia alleges the cameras amount to warrantless surveillance. One outlet reports a January 2026 federal ruling for Flock that is now on appeal, but I could not confirm this with a second source.
- Wide public opposition to the product (47% opposed in a Reuters/Ipsos poll), plus reports of police sharing Flock data with ICE. The CEO says internal morale has suffered most. The brand and film roles would sit at the center of this.
- Glassdoor has several pages named 'Flock'. Only E2121535 is Flock Safety, so the 4.7 and 3.8 ratings on other 'Flock' pages are not about this employer.
- Ratings are inconsistent and the samples are small: Glassdoor about 3.9 (about 214 reviews), Indeed 3.1 (29 reviews), Blind 4.4 (18-19 reviews). None of the reviews found are from the creative or film team.

Bottom line

Both jobs fit Joshua on paper. They are remote, the pay is stated ($200K-$250K for Creative Director, $100K-$120K plus options for Senior Video Editor), and the creative group is new, so the first editor or creative lead would shape how it works. Company-wide reviews are mixed to good: people like the mission and their coworkers, and complain about pace, workload, and management. No reviews were found from the creative or film team. The larger risk is timing. Flock is cutting about 18% of staff in October 2026 while cities cancel contracts and public opposition grows. In interviews, ask: (1) Were these roles affected by the buyout or reduction, and are they budgeted for 2027? (2) Who leads marketing, and who would this role report to? (3) What is the film and production budget? (4) How does the brand team handle public criticism of the product? (5) Is an Arizona-based hire fine, given that the editor posting prioritizes Atlanta and Boston? Also decide whether you are comfortable having brand work for a surveillance company in your portfolio.
